Bridal Shower

Thirty neighbors and friends of Miss Elsie Luft, a November bride-elect, gathered at the home of Mrs. Ed Klinck on Saturday afternoon, November 20.

The afternoon was spent in contests, giving the bride-to-be advice. A piano solo by Betty Klinck, and a piano duet by June and Margaret Klinck were also rendered, after which the bride-to-be received many lovely gifts from a "wishing well." As each present was drawn up out of the well, the giver made a wish to Miss Elsie, after which lunch was served.

Evangelical Church Notes

The theme on Sunday morning will be "The Price of Power." Jesus said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow Me." Are we willing to do this?

At 7:30 p.m. the Women's Missionary Society will conduct the annual Thank Offering meeting. The minister will speak on the theme, "The Goodness of God," and a missionary program will be given.

Let us magnify the name of the Lord because of His blessings to us, and for the privilege of serving Him.

Weddings.

MOON-BERSCHT

A wedding of great interest was solemnized in the rectory of the Roman Catholic church at Olds, on Wednesday, November 10, at 3 p.m., when Father McLellan united in marriage, Martin Riley Moon, eldest son of W. C. Moon, Didsbury, and Mildred Dora Berscht, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Berscht, Elkton, a popular young couple of the Didsbury district.

The bride looked charming in a Marina blue crepe dress with chapel veil and coronet to match. She carried a bouquet of pink carnations, and her only jewelry was a "Mother-of-Pearl" brooch, the gift from the groom. The bride's gift to the groom was a gold signet ring.

Frank Moon and Mrs. Day Falkner, brother and sister of the groom, attended the couple. Bob McGiffin played a violin solo, entitled "I Love You Truly", during the signing of the register.

A reception for 25 people was held at the home of the groom's mother, Mrs. Mack, Elm Mack, Mrs. Lida Pearson, Mrs. Max Wood, Mrs. Herbert Goetz, Mrs. Vera Reifenstein and Father McLellan, were the only guests besides the immediate families.

Miss Wynne Moon, of the Holy Cross Hospital, Calgary, very luckily was granted time off for this wedding.

The happy couple spent the following week visiting friends and relatives at Elkton, Fallen Timber and Didsbury.

A wedding dance was held at the Rugby hall on Friday, November 12. The crowded hall, the number of nice gifts and the many happy wishes showed the very high esteem in which this young couple are held.

Mr. and Mrs. Moon are at present living in Calgary, where they are both employed.

Didsbury Jottings

By A.C.H.

If this lovely weather lasts much longer, the young men's fancy will lightly turn, and sit that.

For the first time in twenty years, we put the storm windows on without being blinded by snow, and freezing our fingers. And in the middle of November, too.

Guess most of you are wondering how the battle at Olds went off on Sunday. You remember it was a battle between the 11th Calgary Tank reserves of the South, and the one from the North. The South being, of course, the Didsbury & Carstairs detachment.

Well, they met for the fray at 9:30 on Sunday morning. They each carried respirators, steel helmets, ammunition pouches, haversacks and lunch. This list was later augmented by rifles, bombs, ammunition and bayonets. They returned from the battle at 5:15, just in time to hear Charlie McCarthy.

What happened in between is, to a large extent, determined by which side you are listening to, what we mean. After all, it figure that they captured the whole of the Didsbury and Carstairs detachment, and took them prisoners. The Didsbury and Carstairs men laugh provocatively at such ideas. Don't those northern guys know they had all been mowed down before they got even a good view of their enemy?

Colonel Jull, we believe, maintained a state of co-belligerency towards both sides. If you know what we mean. After all, it really takes a live bullet to prove one's point, doesn't it?

Judging by the appearance of the weary reserves, they had both put up a pretty good fight.

If any of you bridge players think you are adepts at post mortems, just listen to those men in the black berets, some time. And ask them, just for fun, why they lost the battle on Sunday. The answers will vary from—1. They didn't; 2. The suicide squad didn't suicide; 3. Some body had to go back for orders; 4. Somebody else led them crooked, and 5. Have you ever tried crawling three quarters of a mile on your stomach? Which, if you happen to be a lady, is just a trifle disconcerting.

We heard sounds of grand singing coming from the E.V. Church on Saturday evening, as we passed by. There was a special singer from Calgary leading them.

The Junior Ladies Aid met at Mrs. Garner's on Monday night. They seem to have some fine talent lined up for the concert and lecture, Tuesday, November 30, at 8 p.m. The Rev. Whyte Smith is the lecturer. Adults 35c, children 15c. The Juniors have also planned to entertain the Senior Ladies. The next meeting is at Mrs. Woods.

As Cpl. C. Johnson said as he hurled the bomb, "This ought to bring the house down."

Public Health Services

Rev. and Mrs. D. Whyte Smith attended the Westcott Ladies Aid meeting last Wednesday, at the home of Miss Ruth Johnson.

Mr. Smith gave an interesting and informative address on "Public Health Services and Immunization".

The speaker stressed the need for intelligent interest on all matters of Public Health, and advised everyone to take advantage of the services offered through Clinics and the Health Unit.

He also pointed out the need to enlighten public opinion on the improved services that will be offered in the future, especially the need for enlarged hospitalization for Didsbury district.

British Women Are Showing Their Mettle In Accomplishment Of Countless War Positions

THERE is practically no type of work that British women are not engaged in today. The jobs most of them are doing are hard and tiresome. Also, in Britain, there is the problem of blackouts, long distances to and from work, and more stringent rationing than in Canada. All these make the lot of a woman worker in a British factory much more difficult than that of her Canadian counterpart.

In 1941, the British ministry of labour was given power of direction over British women. Under an order, women could be called upon to register in age groups and then posted where they were most needed. In December, 1941 these powers were extended. Since that time women can, as and when needed, be conscripted into national service.

The British government has helped these embryo war workers as much as possible. It provides training centres and has converted technical schools and colleges into auxiliaries to give the inexperienced workers basic understanding of tools and general factory atmosphere and routine. Towards the end of their training period, women workers go from "problems" to actual production of small parts. Production benefits directly and indirectly from these training centres.

Today in Britain, in addition to women in the armed forces, auxiliary civilian defence, nursing and police, there are approximately 7,000,000 women working full time in industry. Adding to these the women doing full-time unpaid work in the British Women's Voluntary Services and other volunteer organizations, the number not engaged in some war activity becomes infinitesimal.

The British women's war effort can be divided into four main groups. First comes the uniformed services; this includes civil defence and police. Second, there is nursing and allied services; third, the women's land army, and fourth, women in industry. In Britain today, 60 per cent of the personnel of the royal ordnance factories are women. And women are rapidly taking over the machine, iron and steel, shipbuilding repair and aircraft production industries. The ministry of labour is helping women workers of the Old Country in every possible way. Adequate welfare arrangements, canteens, good midday meals and careful health supervision in all factors have their place in the scheme of things.

Farm Machinery

Now Is The Time To Make Any Necessary Repairs

Repair delays particularly during seeding and harvest time often result in great loss of yield and quality. It is a wise policy immediately after the fall work has been completed to make a list of the known parts to be replaced and repaired. Under the conditions that exist and are likely to exist for the war's duration, it is wise to order parts well in advance of their actual need, otherwise long delays are likely to occur.

As far as possible, repairing should be done during fall and winter when there is not so much work to be done outdoors as during the growing season. Repairs that cannot be done on the farm should be taken to the blacksmith or other repairman in the fall and winter so that his work may be more evenly distributed throughout the year.

In overhauling machinery, all bearings, axles, and similar parts subject to wear should be taken apart and examined carefully. Any that are not likely to work well for another full season should be replaced. Other parts should be thoroughly cleaned and examined, taking particular care to see that the lubricating parts are working well. Parts that work in the ground, such as cultivator shovels, and discs should also be checked and those that are cracked or badly worn should be replaced. Others may require sharpening to insure best results for the following season.

A reasonable number of well chosen implements all kept in first class working condition will do better work than many machines in indifferent working order.

There were 14,500,000 people in Burma before the war. 241

Toys For Christmas

Fair Supply Will Be Available In Plastic And Wood

Maybe Santa Claus will be humming "Waltzing Matilda" this year. Laden with metal toys in previous years, Santa this yuletide will fit like a feather over the rooftops carrying wood toys, plastic toys, cardboard toys, fluffy toys and a few dolls that cry.

The Prices Board said wood and plastic toys would be available in fair supply. There will be cotton toys although supplies of cotton for this purpose are not limitless. There won't be toys like miniature tents—text cloth is needed for other and more serious purposes.

Two fashions decree that the boy who used to build the tower of London from metal sets will build the same structure with materials of cardboard and wood. Even wagons and trains are being made of cardboard—stout cardboard, they say. Being short of labor, the toy-makers like the idea of children building their own toys, so up in Santa's workshop the production line is busy on pieces of this and that, and the intention is to leave the intriguing assembly to Johnny himself.

Battleships, tanks, jeeps, airplanes and guns are being made of plastic and wood, and they will now down Japanese and Nazi soldiers, sailors and airmen made of cardboard placed on wooden stands.

NOT MUCH HELP

Lieut. Ian P. McGeal, soaring around over the Kansas plains, suddenly realized he was lost. He recalled flying instructions had told him to sweep low over the water tower and read the name of the town. He got lost. He spotted a tower and had to drop to 500 feet before he could read the sign. It said: "Go to church Sunday."

"Grooming" Locomotives For Wartime Work

"Grooming" is one of the highly important jobs accomplished daily in Canadian National Railways roundhouses throughout the System. The term applies to the servicing of locomotives before they leave the stalls to start on a long journey hauling a troop train, or one of those big fast freight trains made up of carloads of war supplies and materials. Grooming is usually unseen by the public but it is one of the multiplicity of daily tasks each essential to the Railway's war effort.

This grooming consists of filling the engine tender with coal and water; cleaning, greasing and oiling; making necessary adjustments and light running repairs; testing air brakes, electrical and water pump systems; a thorough inspection of the locomotive to ensure perfect operation. This requires an average of one and a half to two hours for a turn-about job, and three to four hours for a general servicing.

At Canada's largest and busiest roundhouse, Turcot, in Montreal, operating on a 24-hour basis, Canadian National motive power is turned out at the average rate of one locomotive in less than every eleven minutes. Accommodation is available for 62 engines, five of the 57 pits each being capable of servicing

Bombs And Biscuits

The Nutritional Value Of Soda Crackers Is Well-Known

(By Molly O'Dale)

Important items in the equipment of lifeboats and life-rafts on vessels of the navy are the biscuit tins. These are usually hermetically sealed tins containing hard biscuits, designed to provide the maximum quantity of food compressed into the smallest possible space. These biscuits are called "Emergency Rations" and are literal descendants of the "Sea Biscuits" used as bread on old-time sailing ships which were at sea sometimes for months on end.

And they are closely related, too, to the Soda Crackers which are so universally used in Canadian homes.

Soda Crackers have much to recommend them besides their tasty flavor. They are really the "Staff of Life" dehydrated. Good white bread, for instance, contains moisture to 36% of its weight, but, in Soda Crackers the moisture content is reduced to less than 6%. Unlike the majority of dehydrated food products, Soda Crackers need no special preparation. You eat them as they come. They are always ready to serve.

Then, when it comes to calories, it's hard to beat Soda Crackers, which, on the average, give you 100 calories for one cent. This is second only to navy beans which give 160 calories for a cent—and miles ahead of chicken which gives only eight calories for a cent.

But aside from their high nutrition value and economy, Biscuits and Soda Crackers are popular mainly because of adaptability. You can enjoy them alone, spread with a little butter. They go fine with milk, cheese, jam, marmalade, soup, peanut butter, etc. And they are so handy—both for serving at regular mealtimes or as a between-meal or bedtime snack.

MILK FROM SOY BEANS

Milk from soy beans is as good as that from cows, according to farm experts in Salesbury, Southern Rhodesia, in reporting the results of experimentation conducted by the colony's agricultural station. The bean milk can be used either fresh or condensed or to make cheese, it was discovered.

Röntgen rays, or X-rays as they were called to indicate their mysterious nature, were discovered a bare 50 years ago. Radium, the source of gamma rays, was discovered by Madame Curie a few years later. Until the war, radiography was an expensive laboratory plaything. With the outbreak of hostilities in 1939, however, it became obvious that more accurate methods were needed to inspect weapons for the fighting fronts.

Visible defects were not the only ones that these rays could check. The lives of many of Canada's fighting men might easily hang on some hidden flaw. On X-ray film, thin sections of the parts showed up as dark areas, and where a cavity in the metal left less material for the X-rays to penetrate, a corresponding dark spot appeared on the film. Gamma rays, originating in radium, penetrate the metal in the same way. They are not quite as sensitive, however, as X-rays.

Industrial experts have estimated that the use of X-rays and gamma rays in Canadian industry makes it possible to use 25 per cent less metal with safety. The Royal Canadian Air Force recognizes the value of the use of these rays. They have made a ruling that they will not accept plans which have not been subjected to radiographic tests. The Inspection Board of the United Kingdom and Canada maintains such testing equipment in plants from coast to coast.

In the National Research Council, the Physics Division has a radiographic laboratory where radiography can be used for inspection of aluminum, magnesium, bronze and steel. In addition to carrying out radiographic examinations, the staff work out techniques, advise manufacturers where and how radiography can be used, and train radiographers to carry on this work in Canadian industry.

The World of Wheat
by H. G. L. StrangeNO SOIL MINING

A few years ago, when certain areas of the Southern Prairies suffered from successive years of drought, many said our wheat lands were "washed up", that never again would they produce normal crops. This sad condition, they said, was caused by the farmers' improvident methods of "soil mining" the land, by the continual growing of wheat, and so the fertility of the soil, it was claimed, had been lost.

During these years, I, for one, was bold enough to say that this was all great nonsense—that the fertility of the soil had not been lost, and that when the rains came again normal crops certainly would be produced. These normal crops did later occur, as we know.

Additional confirmation of the fact that land will continue to produce bountiful crops is shown by the recent statement of Sir John Russell, of the Rothamstead Experimental Station, England, in speaking of the famous Broadbalk field which has been sown for 100 straight years to wheat without manure or fertilizer. Last year, 1942, the 99th wheat crop on this field yielded 26½ bushels to the acre.

This indicates that if we use reasonable care with our land, to prevent soil-blowing and wind water erosion as much as possible, we can continue perhaps indefinitely to produce good wheat crops on our prairie lands.

ITEMS OF INTEREST IN THE WORLD OF FOODSTUFFS

Portugal's 1943 wheat crop is estimated to be about 350,000 tons below normal annual requirements.

U.S. winter wheat acreage goals do not appear to have been achieved reports indicate—Rumania, as a result of the lengthy drought harvested a poor corn crop this year.

Mexican rice production this year, is estimated at about 115,000 tons slightly more than last year.—The Indian Government reports that more than 650,000 tons of food grains have been sent to famine areas during the past three months.—Recent rains in Australia have brought about a considerable improvement in crop prospects, and estimates of the probable output are being raised.

Raising Hogs to Help Win the War

(W. D. Albright, superintendent, Beaverlodge Station, in The Budget)

A point of conscience: If Britain needs bacon to enable her to carry on the battle for our common cause, are we doing our duty in going out of hogs because the new premium on grain holds promise of an easier living through its production for sale? (Perhaps we may be unable to deliver our whole output, anyway.)

The soldiers of Montgomery and Alexander, the men of the Navy and Air Force, are giving everything they have for victory and sometimes, as Gen. Eisenhower reminds us, are wondering whether they are backed up 100 percent on the home front. Are we backing our fighters as wholeheartedly as the Russians back theirs? Or are we an inferior race to the Russians? Those of us who can't fight may help in other ways. Many of us may help by raising hogs. Those who carry on in that spirit will experience a zest they never found in raising them merely for profit.

Learned the Hard Way.

Ernest H. Elsdon, driller in a local shipyard, came off the night shift recently to find his room burglarized and all his savings—$5,750—stolen. "If I'd had the sense to put that cash in a bank, I wouldn't have lost the $2,750 to a burglar", he said.

"I'd been saving that money to buy a house and all I've got left after months of work is a battered strong box. I made the mistake, you see, of keeping that money by me instead of putting it in the bank every pay day. Now I've got to start at the beginning again, but I'm going to stay at my job as a driller until I've got the money to buy that house. No more foolish risks for me. From now on I'm letting the bank keep my cash safe."

Rebecca Activities

Nine Rebecca members met at the home of Mrs. J. B. Worthington on Wednesday, Nov. 17.

Stump bandages were demonstrated by our convener, and ten of these were made during the afternoon. Some members busied themselves winding yarn. The usual amount of sewing was given out.

A delightful lunch of tea and buns was served by the hostess to complete a most enjoyable afternoon.

Next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Jim Johnson on Wednesday, Dec. 1st.

Jams & Jellies Aid Charity Benefits

Sweet workers for sweet charity may increase their benefits through the sale of homemade jams and jellies, says the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

Local Ration Board will give permission for the sale of homemade jams and jellies by charitable organizations without coupons.

Such gifts for charity may only be accepted from consumers, but not from merchants or through trade channels — a beekeeper, however, might offer honey from his personal stock. The sale of this honey at a women's bazaar to benefit an orphanage — or in some similar instance — need be made without coupons.

Slaughtering Rules Hold

Prices Board regulations governing the slaughtering of hogs have not been cancelled or suspended, and must be observed as an integral of the meat rationing system, officials state.

Some confusion has arisen in the minds of hog producers over the Meat Board announcement, from the Dominion Department of Agriculture, lifting the quota restrictions on the slaughtering of hogs for the domestic market. But this announcement has nothing to do with slaughtering regulations of the Prices Board which are a wartime measure designed with meat rationing, to assure equitable distribution of meat at home as well as supply allied nations.

Slaughtering regulations of the Board apply to hogs, sheep, cattle or calves for the meat trade, officials affirm.

Five soldiers at Currie Barracks, Calgary, warned that they were moving out, overseas, promptly bought a Victory Bond each, and donated their blood to the Red Cross Clinic.

Red Cross Asks For Fruit and Jellies

An appeal has been made for jam, jellies and fruit for the Junior Red Cross Children's Hospital. The response has not been quite as good as expected and we think this matter has been overlooked by many who would like to contribute.

Please spare at least one jar for the children. They can be left at either Studer's store or with Johnson & McCloy.

The dead line for receiving fruit is this week, when the contributions received will be sent to the Junior Red Cross Hospital.

Westcott Notes

The ladies of the W.I., met at the home of Mrs. Shields on Thursday last, a week earlier than usual. Fourteen members and three visitors were present.

After the business was finished a very pretty shower was held for Miss Elsie Luft. A wishing well which previously been erected and decorated by Mrs. A. M. Robertson was the centre of attraction. Little Howard Robertson turned the handle and as each parcel was lifted from the well, the donor made a wish for the bride-to-be. The good wishes and lovely presents were gratefully received. A pretty little ditty, with appropriate words, was sung for Elsie by Mrs. Ed. Klinck and Mrs. J. Hughes, with harp accompaniment.

The winners of the knitting contest were: 1st Mrs. McFarlane and 2nd Mrs. Luft. There were eight sweaters for 12 year olds entered in the contest. A vote of thanks was awarded the judges.

It was a very sociable afternoon and enjoyed by all present. The meeting closed with the National Anthem and lunch was served by the hostess.

Notes From the West.

St. Pauls Ladies' Aid held their annual sale of goods at the Rugby hall. After a short program, the sale goods were auctioned by Mr. Louis Hildebrandt.

A shower was held in honor of Mrs. R. Stevenson (nee Bertha Good) at the home of Mrs. Herman Goetjen. The bride received many lovely gifts.

New Zealand has offered to panel and furnish a room in the City of London's famous Guild Hall, which was wrecked by bombs in the great "blitz" and is being reconstructed.

The percentage of losses of aircraft making the North Atlantic crossing was less than one-half of one per cent. for the year ending Sept. 30, the British Air Ministry announced.

Long range fuel tanks constructed from paper, animal glue and gelatine now are carried by British fighter planes. There is little loss of material when they are jettisoned.

The United States shipped 19,722 tons and the United Kingdom 10,848 tons of supplies to French West Africa for civilian use during the first six months of 1943. The War Cabinet announced.

Taxi owners predict a cab-famine for London this winter. There are only 4,500 taxis left in the metropolitan area, about half the pre-war number, and the demand has increased 50 per cent.

Cmdr. Stephen King-Hall, British Conservative M.P., told an Empire Club audience at Toronto that the price civilization is paying for war totals $50,000 a second or $422,000,000 a day.

Care Of Mattresses

Require Extra Attention As Material Is Becoming Scarce

Canadian housewives have developed many thrifty ways during the war years. These are days to be properly appreciative of a good mattress. War workers must have a restful sleep, and if mattresses are bumpy, sleep suffers. The materials from which mattresses are made are becoming increasingly difficult to procure, and the situation is not likely to improve for some time.

A pad should be used over the mattress. This protects the mattress and makes for sounder sleeping comfort.

If the mattress rests on open coil springs, use a pad between spring and mattress. An old quilt or cotton blanket is best. This will insure against snagging or tearing the mattress. It can be held in place with tapes, stitched to the pad and tied to the spring frame.

A light mummy cover is a good investment for any mattress. It will keep the dust out and is removable for laundering.

Turn the mattress weekly, one week from end to end, the next week from side to side. This helps to equalize wear and bumps and hollows are not as likely to develop.

During fine weather, open the windows wide and sun and air the mattress. Turn the covers back and leave the bed open for about an hour before making it up.

The mattress will receive new vigour if every four months it is aired for half a day and cleaned with vacuum cleaner attachment or whisk broom.

ROYAL INDIAN NAVY

Units of the Royal Indian Navy did fine work in the Battle of the Atlantic, in the Red Sea, and in the Persian Gulf on India's western bastions. The entry of Japan into the war brought the Royal Indian Navy right into the fighting line. Among other feats, it was responsible for organizing and carrying out the evacuation of 40,000 Indians from Burma ports.

Free Legal Advice

The Poor Man's Lawyer Association Is Operating In Britain

Since the outbreak of war, further steps have been taken in the United Kingdom to ensure that free legal advice reaches those who would otherwise be unable to afford it. The Poor Man's Lawyer Association—which is run by the Law Society and was established before the war—continues to give free legal advice to poor persons. In addition, the Poor Man's Lawyer Association, introduced since the war, has been set up by surveyors and others to give free advice on the War Damage Act.

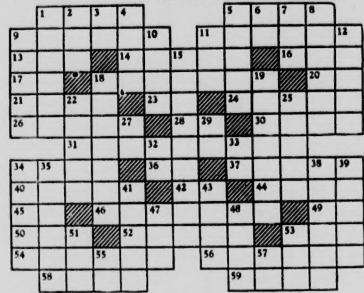

Has Big Possibilities

But Helicopter Not Yet Adapted For General Use

According to the experts mass production of the helicopter is not the answer to the readjustment problem which will face the airplane industry when the war demand drops off. The helicopter is technically safe and fool proof in the hands of a trained operator. It needs no airfield. But engineers liken it to the automobiles made before the last war. It has big possibilities in the future when it has been through many stages of refinement and perfection. Also, the helicopter is not yet cheap to build.

Beau Jonathan

by J. B. Ryan

CHAPTER X.

ANNE looked up questioningly and even Jonathan frowned for neither the girl nor the man yet saw the net being woven by the tall dark man who blocked his path. Jonathan shouted, "Summon the bailiffs, Farquhar! I'll swing from a hundred gibbets before I let her even listen to your infamous proposal!"

"Wait, Jonathan! Wait!" implored Anne. "I do not want you to be killed!" As Jonathan subsided, she clung to him still, and turned her head to speak over her shoulder. "I accept, my lord. Spare this man and I shall go with you—"

"Anne!" cried Jonathan. "Send this devil about his business. If you love me—"

Her face was colorless. "I do this because I love you, Jonathan—please do not make it harder for me—"

"I will not permit it! I shall follow you, whatever and wherever you go, and I will not fight me, I shall order my servants to seize him!"

"If you show your nose downstairs," said Farquhar, "I shall tell what I know concerning you."

"Yes, Jonathan?" Anne's smile was wan.

"But Anne—even the shame you would accept will not save me. Lord Farquhar's promises are worthless. What is to prevent him from having me arrested after he has taken you?"

Farquhar answered. "You can make absolutely certain of saving your worthless carcass by getting out of London this very night."

Jonathan broke away from the girl. But sudden as was his lunge, the desperate Anne hampered his movements to such an extent that Farquhar, sensing the man's purpose, leaped Jonathan as he went free. His lordship's lifted arm descended savagely, crushing the butt of the pistol against Jonathan's head, and the stricken man fell forward to the floor and into darkness.

WHEN his senses cleared, Jonathan found himself propped in a heavy chair, a gag in his mouth, Farquhar kneeling to knot the cloth that like the strips already about Jonathan's wrists, bound his legs securely to the frame of the chair. To one side stood Anne, her face as white as the silk of her dress. Her anxious eyes were fixed on Jonathan, but when she saw that he had revived, her glance lowered, her downward lashes making dark brown curves against her cheek.

"Your servants should find you promptly and set you free," said Farquhar. "For your own good, Hale, consider yourself the loser in this game. I shall arm my servants to-night and warn them against your possible coming. If you attempt to molest me, you shall be shot on sight."

The gag made it impossible for Jonathan to answer. But the eyes that glared at Farquhar were eloquent at any words. Farquhar hesitated, fingering the pistol that tempted him, then nodded to himself and stepped to Jonathan's desk.

He found ink, quill and paper. As his lordship wrote busily for a full minute, Jonathan tried to signal for Anne to grasp the opportunity to run while Farquhar's back was turned. But Anne remained quiet and passive, as much a prisoner as the man in the chair.

FARQUHAR folded the paper, dropped wax on the flap and stamped it with the red lying on the desk. "See this document, Hale? You are a most stubborn man, and I do not discount the possibility that you may assassinate me in the days to come as I walk or ride through the London streets. Before I leave this house I shall entrust this sealed paper to one of my friends downstairs with instructions to open it in the event of my death. This paper, Hale, will inform the authorities where to find the man they hunt for Deny's murder."

You take the medication goes straight to inflamed bronchial tubes where it soothes irritation, quiets coughing and loosens tightness and congestion.

der. You will be safe from the gallowes," he ended impressively, "only as long as I live."

He jockeyed the chair, picked up one of Jonathan's own cloaks and draped the garment about the shoulders of the waiting "I shall see to my dear, my dear," murmured Farquhar.

Anne stepped close to the chair of Jonathan, bent over and touched her lips to the man's cheek. "Good-by, Jonathan," she whispered brokenly. "Do not, do not let my sacrifice be in vain."

THE helpless Jonathan watched them leave the room. Before the door had closed on the triumphant backward glance of Farquhar, Jonathan was writhing in the chair, straining against his bonds and attempting to rid his mouth of the gagging cloth. The chair toppled and a slab of paint crashed down on him from above to shoulder as its own weight added to the force with which the chair-back pinned his arm against the floor.

In spite of the discomfort, the desperate struggle continued. He would break an arm or leg, if necessary, to free himself—he must catch Lord Farquhar and kill him!

Jonathan, panting as from a hard day's labor, was still secured to the chair when, at long last, the door opened and Matt Tucker peered into the room.

Entering hastily, he ripped the cloth away from Jonathan's wrists and ankles. "What happened, sir? Has the place been robbed? All our money is in that desk."

Jonathan tore the gag out of his mouth. "Get—get horses, Tucker!" he managed in spite of his dry tongue. "Hurry—I have no time to explain! This is a matter of life and death!"

Without question, Tucker darted from the room. Jonathan pushed himself erect and staggered to the wardrobe as he went. He grabbed the sword down from the wall, fastened it about his waist and, holding back his impatience to go, loaded a brace of pistols and thrust the weapons through the sash about his waist. Then he faced into the hall and down the stairs.

The first person he encountered on the ground floor was Sir Maurice Blaine.

"Ah, Hale!" exclaimed Sir Maurice. "Dash it all, man, where have you been? I've been searching for you. Jonathan interrupted. 'Have you seen Lord Farquhar?'"

"Yes, he's here," Blaine nodded, his lips moving in a faint, suggestive grin. "Glad, Hale, you should have seen the attractive baggage he helped into his carriage."

Jonathan's knotted fist drove into the face of the speaker. "You fool, he's grided!" "What didn't you stop him?"

Blaine reeled back, his face livid with pain and rage. "Damn! He snarled thickly. 'I demand satisfaction for that blow!'"

Jonathan repeated the blow but he had not time for apology. He swept Sir Maurice aside back into the startled onlookers. "I'll see you later about that, Blaine."

MATT TUCKER had one horse saddled when Jonathan reached the stables. Jonathan caught up a second saddle and by the time he had tightened the girth, the servant had the bridles on both horses. Jonathan handed one of the pistols to the sweep.

"Do you know where Lord Farquhar lives, Tucker?" "Jonathan's wrinkled face screwed up, then he nodded. "It lies some distance from here, sir. We shall have to cross most of the city to reach the place." He stared doubtfully at the gun in his hand. "There is to be trouble."

"The role of Beau Jonathan has come to an end, Tucker. In spite of his haste, Jonathan had to acquaint the loyal old fellow with what might lay ahead. Someone is to be killed tonight. Before morning I may be stretched either on a bier or on the floor of a gaol. You, too, may come to grief if you accompany me."

Tucker shoved the pistol beneath his coat and gathered the reins of the nearest horse. "I shall not desert you now, sir."

Thank you, Tucker, Jonathan smiled gratefully. "But I give you your chances. From now on your association is ended. I have given you money enough to keep you for the remainder of your days—"

"You have that," nodded Tucker. "But even so, I am with you to the bitter end. Come, sir, and I will show you the way to his lordship's residence."

The old sweep who had climbed into the saddle during the conversation, kicked his mount with his heel and turned the horse into the alley behind the stable. The moon was up, making it possible to travel the streets at any desired pace. In fact, they were able to move more rapidly because of the absence of daylight. Most of London was asleep now and the thoroughfares cleared of the usual traffic.

Training Pilots In Africa

Southern Rhodesia First In Empire

To Open A Training School

The Southern Rhodesian Air Training Group was the first in the Empire to open a school, the first to turn out trained pilots. The scheme has assumed proportions vastly in excess of what was originally contemplated. It is a co-operative scheme, training men from the United Kingdom, the African territories, the Belgian Congo and other countries. Cost is borne by the United Kingdom and Southern Rhodesia, the contribution to the war effort made by these air-training schools is of great value.

NATIONAL EMERGENCY

Don't waste COAL
Make every shovelfull count!

CANADIAN PACIFIC

PART of the Canadian Pacific Railway's campaign for rigid conservation of coal during this heating season is a special booklet of instructions, the front cover of which is illustrated above and which all those immediately responsible for handling company coal must follow. Supplementing the booklet a general appeal on home saving possible has gone to the almost 70,000 employees of the company and the subject will be kept alive by a continuing international educational series. All phases of the campaign, announced by W. M. Neal, the vice-president, are expected to save 600,000 tons of coal throughout the system itself, with the home savings by Canadian Pacific people expected to add considerably even to that impressive figure. The company saving will be 10 per cent. on the approximate 5,000,000 tons of coal required annually—a remarkable saving, when considered in the light of the Canadian Pacific's own conservation campaign to increase generating efficiency, which has been intensively pursued for 19 years.
